Decline Bloodwork

Bloodwork is an essential step to help ensure that your pet(s) can properly handle and process the anesthetics that are administered prior to any type of procedure. There are numerous risks associated with anesthetizing your pet, including unfortunate circumstance that they do not survive through the procedure. Bloodwork helps ensure the safety of your pet during this sedative instance, better indicating potential problems prior to them occurring. By signing this paper, you acknowledge the risks associated without performing routine bloodwork prior to sedation, in the chance that something goes differently than desired.

Procedure: _____________________________________________________________

Signature of Owner/Agent: ________________________________________________

Date: __________________________________________________________________

Signature of Veterinarian: _________________________________________________

Date: __________________________________________________________________